Under the Magnier family's careful stewardship, the magnificent Palladian manor, built in 1732, has been transformed and extended to include forty-two luxurious bedrooms and suites, a world-class spa, ballroom, and The Guinness Bar, reflecting the hotel's historical links to the godfather of Arthur Guinness, founder of the globally renowned brewery.

Industry veteran, General Manager, Adriaan Bartels has overseen the redevelopment of the hotel over the past four years.

Once home to the archbishops of Cashel, the hotel sits at the foot of the Rock of Cashel, a dramatic limestone outcrop featuring the most impressive cluster of medieval buildings in Ireland. The hotel enjoys a private pathway to this historic site, and the gardens, spa, and many bedrooms offer impressive views of this globally renowned attraction.

■ Style

Exuding charm and elegance, the original grandeur of Cashel Palace Hotel has been expertly preserved. Off the main street in Cashel, a tree-lined avenue welcomes guests before they step into the entrance hall that retains its original wood panelling and two imposing fluted Corinthian columns. Beyond the hall, stands the remarkable staircase, an early Georgian style carved from red pine and featuring hundreds of intricately hand-turned banisters.

Interconnecting lounge areas exude comfort and are warmed by open log fires, a perfect refuge to rest or relax before exploring the town's famed Celtic history or further afield. »

“Once home to the archbishops of Cashel, the hotel sits at the foot of the Rock of Cashel, a dramatic limestone outcrop featuring the most impressive cluster of medieval buildings in Ireland. The hotel enjoys a private pathway to this historic site, and the gardens, spa, and many bedrooms offer impressive views of this globally renowned attraction.

To the rear of the manor house the historic landscaped gardens are designed to include some of the original garden walls on the estate which date back to medieval times. Equally of note are two ancient mulberry trees, planted in 1702, that are still standing tall today.

The original 'Bishops Walk' will continue to allow guests private access to the Rock of Cashel, ancient seat of the Kings of Munster and home to a 13th century Cathedral.

The entire design process has been directly overseen by Mrs. Susan Magnier alongside the Emma Pearson Design Studio in London, Mulcahy Construction, Dunmore, Jonathan Dinnewell at Smallwood Architects, London, and Reddy Architects in Kilkenny.

Each Garden Wing suite offers a separate sitting room to enjoy down time together

Superior rooms are located within the Garden Wing and feature lavishly appointed bathrooms with separate bath, shower, and double vanity units. The charming School House contains an additional set of Superior Rooms which are ideal for sharing with family and friends. Deluxe rooms are predominantly in the Main House, and these retain a wonderful sense of charm of a bygone era, boasting wooden beams and fireplace features.
